

I cannot endorse the proposed changes. While the elimination of the Morse Code proficiency examination should be a top priority for the FCC, the changes as proposed do not adequately address my concerns.

Eliminating the Morse Code proficiency examination should be accompanied by a change in the written examinations. I would prefer to see the elimination of the published answers to the examination questions. I believe that this will encourage greater technical knowledge and advancement of the Amateur Radio service.